Detectives searching for the kidnapped Antonio Mannino are looking for two men who were implicated in the barrel murder mystery, and the discovery was made this afternoon that one of the men sought has been away from his place of business for forty-eight hours. The boy was kidnapped Tuesday night.

The man in whose custody the boy is supposed to be has a business in West Thirty-ninth street. Antonio Cucozza, who enticed the little fellow from his home in Brooklyn, has made affidavit that this man is the head of the conspiracy to extort money from the elder Mannino and has written the letters demanding $50,000 ransom. The other man sought for owned a butcher shop on the east side, where Benedetto Madoni, the victim of the barrel murder mystery, spent his last night on earth.

Warrants have been issued for both men, and the detectives have instructions from Magistrate Tighe, of the Butler Street Court, Brooklyn, bring them in dead or alive. It is feared by the police that the men will murder the boy when they discover that their share in the kidnapping plot has been exposed.

Capt. Rooney, of the Amity street station, and his detectives searched all last night for little Mannino and renewed the search to-day after sehing a little sleep. In the course of the night they visited fifty houses in Brooklyn and Manhattan, in which Italians of the criminal class are known to reside. There is hopefulness on the part of the police that the entire Black Hand conspiracy is on the eve of discovery. The head men are supposed to be criminals of the east side who have directed operations in counterfeitar, blackmailing, robbery and murder for years. Hitherto it has been found ble to get suspects to talk, but the kidnapping case has opened up mine of information which it is thought will yield results.

There are now three men and a woman under arrest in the case of the dinapped boy. These are Angelo Cucozza, who lured the little feilow from me at No. 62 Amity street last Tuesday night; Francesco Coneglio, home at No. $17 East Thirty-ninth street, this borough, the child taken: Antonio Galiti, of No. 35 Pacific street, Brooklyn, implicated in

The mother of the kidnapped boy received another letter from the men who are holding him to-day. It was posted in Manhattan last night pering the summer at the police the text of the letter has seen his father's barber shop. Yesterday afternoon as he was walking and is written in Italian. By advice of the police the text of the letter has been withheld, but a free translation of one sentence is:

"You have talked to the police. Remember the man who was found dead in a barrel."

Madonio, the barrel murder victim, was killed because the gang feared the direction of a policeman, whereupon his pursuer turned and ran back the members had been engaged. Although it was established that the murdered man had been seen last alive in a butcher shop on the east side with members of the gang, and although a pawn ticket for the murdered man's watch was found in the pocket of one of the prisoners, Tomasso Petto, by the father of the Mannino boy, short and to the point. One received known as "The Ox," all were discharged on reccommendation of the District-Attorney, who said that he could not make out a case. They were implicated in another murder but could not be prosecuted.

ANOTHER CRIME TRACED TO THEM.

This is not the first time that members of the band which was apprehended at the time of the barrel murder have been suspected of connection A general slarm has been sent out for all of the thirteen men who with the Black Hand. One of them was arrested two years ago in connection with the murder of Giuseppe Catania, a grocer, of Brooklyn, whose body was found in the bay after he had refused to pay tribute to the society. Because of the reticence of those conversant with the facts, due to the fear of the vongeance of the powerful organization, no evidence could be found against the men accused of the murder.

He told him how he would surely be put to death by the "Black Hand" Society if he talked, and added that he did not want to die. He told the man the name and address of the gang's leader, the man who had planned the kidnapping.

Cucozza was taken from his cell quickly. He became dumb as an oyster at once, refusing to answer all questions. But the secret was out. Police Captain Rooney and half a dozen detectives hurried to No. 35 Pacific street, the house occupied by Galiti. Reaching Galiti's rooms location of every one of the Russian vessels which made the dash out of Port Arthur at 7 o'clock Wednesday morning. This is the report sent by Minister Griscom:

According to latest reports received at headquarters Japanese fleet attacked Russian fleet emerging from Port Arthur to the south of Round Island, off Tallen Bay.

The Russian fleet was finally defeated and fled during the night. Cruisers Askold, Novik and one other, and one destroyer entered Klaochou Bay on the night of the 11th. One destroyer fled to Chefoo.

Five battle-ships and one cruiter, probably the Diana; one hospital ship and several destroyers returned to Port Arthur between dawn and midday on the 11th. Apparently no damage to Japanese fleet.

GREAT BATTLE FOLLOWED.

The battle which followed, the attempt of the Russians to escape was perhaps the greatest naval action since the adversariant modern battle-ship. The Russians were defeated, their fleet by and scattered, and those that found their way back to Port Arthur are said to be badly crippled, although there is no positive information on this point.

The bulk of the fleet got back to Port Arthur. This consisted of five battle-ships, one cruiser, believed to be the Diana, a hospital ship which was said to be loaded with women and children, and a number of de-

This accounts for all of the vessels in the Russian fleet, with the exeption, perhaps, of a few destroyers which are reported unofficially to have been seen at other points.

The indications now are that the Japanese will, before many hours, if t has not already been done, administer a crushing blow to those vessels which have taken to neutral ports. Heretofore the Japanese system of communication has been so absolutely perfect that there can be no doubt that Togo has every vessel that escaped him in the dark definitly located and will force them from neutral ports where they have taken refuge and attack them in overwhelming force. The fact that Minister Griscom, from Tokio to-day, is able to place every one of the fugitive ships exactly proves that Tokio knows where they all are.

BATTLE LASTED ALL DAY.

Minister Griscom's despatch shows that the fight was an all-day one; that the Russians fought bravely for many hours, but were outmanoeuvred and finally compelled to seek cover. At the time that the Russians emerged from Port Arthur they believed the Japanese fleet to be exhausted from its two days of constant bombardment. Outside of the guard ships only a dozen vessels of the Japanese fleet could be seen on the horizon, and they were of the cruiser class. A better opportunity for a flight from a base which had become untenable could not have been found.

The Russian feet was engaged at once by the torpedo flotilla. The cruisers moved up, and within an hour the bulk of Togo's fleet came in sight. For hours the Russians were able to keep the fighting at long range, but Togo gradually closed in, and the fighting became furious. As darkness settled over the sea the Russians found themselves in a bad way, and were obliged to scatter. The vessels made off in groups. The fact that the Rysshitelni made for Chefoo alone is taken as evidence that she bore important despatches which it had been impossible to

The extent of the damage to the Japanese fleet is carefully guarded. From Japanese sources it is said that not a vessel was hurt, but other reports are different. It is generally believed that in spite of their triumph the Japanese sustained severe losses.

Despatches from Berlin state that Vice-Admiral Von Prittwits, commanding the German East Asiatic squadron, has sailed for Tsingchou, at the mouth of Kiaochou Bay, with the armored cruiser Fuerst Bismarok and that the German cruiser Seeadler has sailed for the same port from Shanhalkwan and Taku, in the province of Pechili. The German Foreign Office has given notice to the Russians that they must leave Tsin within twenty-four hours. It is understood that the Russians have claimed the right to say in port as injured vessels. The Germans, it is reported, will not tolerate this, and that is why Vice-Admiral Von Prittwits has gone to Tsingchou. Von Prittwits probably has positive instructions to see that the Russians quit this German port on Klacchou Bay. The outcome of such a fight is parthetic to contemplate. The Japanese are ouside with a force against which the Russians have not a single chance, and if they do venture out to give battle they will probably be blown out of the water.
